

I believe the FCC should rule that no "broadcast flag" copy protection be mandated as consumers should have the right to record anything they want. I personally own a Tivo and record many shows that I watch while I am at work so I may view them later. If this is mandated this will prevent me from watching what I want to watch (as Tivo evolves and records HDTV broadcasts). Should the cable stations be able to dictate when I watch their shows? I'm not going to come home at 9pm to watch Survivor just because CBS tells me to.
